

MAY BLACKLIST DOCTORS WHO FAIL TO REPORT DISEASES

County Medical Director
Blames Trenton and Other
Out-of-State Physicians

MUST KEEP QUARANTINE

Strongly Condemns Evasion
Of the Various Quarantines

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 17—Blacklisting of Trenton and other out-of-state doctors who neglect to live up to the legal requirement by the Board of Health was suggested by Dr. George Taylor, Bucks County Medical Inspector. He also suggested that the Board refuse to accept from the offending doctors their diagnosis as a basis for excusing from quarantine or releasing from quarantine.

This suggestion by the county medical inspector followed his inspection of the health and sanitary condition of the schools here a few days ago. Dr.
Taylor was satisfied with the condition of the schools but he expressed decided dissatisfaction with communicable diseases in the borough. He strongly condemned the evasion of the quarantine law both by parents deliberately failing to report cases and by doctors failing to report the cases under his care. He pointed out there seems to be cases where communicable diseases are diagnosed as non-communicable, as diagnosing measles as a rash and mumps as swollen glands. The inspector suggested that steps be taken to report suspected cases to the State Department of Health with a view of having them investigated and to have prosecution proceedings started where findings showed a deliberate intent to violate the law.

This health report was submitted to the Board of Education at its meeting Friday night.

Dr. George A. Enion, the school physician here, reported he had completed the inspection of the elementary grade pupils and has inspected approximately one half of the high school pupils.

It was reported that through the Parent-Teacher Association, under the direction of Miss Dorothy Gish, a faculty member, attention had been given to a number of cases needing eye attention. Where it was found that glasses were needed and the parents were unable to pay, the P. T. A. paid for them.

In his report Supervising Principal
M. R. Reiter stated that Floyd Kerr, a graduate of the local high school and of the University of Illinois, is substituting for Harry Marshall who is off duty on account of serious illness in his family.

Mr. Reiter also reported the WPA work on the school grounds is practically at a standstill because of the weather.

The question of refinancing the outstanding school bonds at a lower rate of interest was again discussed and it was found that little or nothing can be saved even if the new bonds were issued for 2½ per cent. It was reported that the State Teachers' Retirement Board, holders of these bonds, paid a large premium when the bonds were first purchased and if they permitted them to be redeemed to be replaced by bonds paying lower interest, the Board would not be willing to sell the bonds at par but about $35,000 would be added to the issue because of the premium paid at the time the several issues were purchased. It was the consensus of opinions among the Board members that it would not be good business to make the change. The matter was not closed, however, but a further investigation is being made into the change.

Tax Collector Neal Nolan reported that notices had been sent to all delinquent 1934 taxpayers and that $21-567.77 is still outstanding on the 1935 duplicate. Mr. Nolan submitted a list of persons who are aged and infirm and asked for remission of their taxes.
In the matter of the property taxes on the 1934 duplicate, which he held out instead of filing with the County Treasurer on May 1 last, Mr. Nolan stated that for those which had not been paid he has levied on rents where rents are collectable and on the property which are unseated land he returned to the School Board to have the same entered as a lien against the property.

Because of requests from organizations of the borough for the use of the school auditorium and part of the administration building, the building committee presented a set of rules, regulations and fees which were adopted. Announcement was made that four rows of bleachers had been purchased for the north side of the gymnasium to provide additional seating space for the basketball games and it was also stated that the stage in the auditorium is being rebuilt.

Mrs. Sarah Smith, Former Bristolian, Dies Saturday

A former Bristol business-woman,
Mrs. Sarah Smith, known to many residents here, died at the home of her son, William Smith, in Upper Darby, Saturday. She was the widow of Frank Smith. In addition to her son, one brother survives.

The deceased for many years conducted a trimming store on Mill street, and during her residence here formed countless friendships. She had been ill for two weeks.

The funeral service will be conducted at the Molden funeral home, Bath street, tomorrow at two o'clock, and burial will be made in Bristol Cemetery. Friends may call this evening at the home of the deceased, 57 Keystone street, Upper Darby.

Clean All Gutters, Is Appeal of The Borough

Drainage of the slush and water from street intersections is a problem confronting the borough authorities and in some sections is rather serious.
Many of the inlets are open but the water cannot get to them due to the gutters being filled with snow and ice.
Conditions are particularly bad in the vicinity of the P. R. station at Beaver and Prospect streets, and Beaver and Garden streets, where water is ankle deep in many places.

The borough authorities today appealed to property owners to keep their gutters clean so that the water will run to the inlets. If the gutters are cleaned the water will in many instances drain rapidly.

Conditions in the Delaware river are unchanged and some say that it will be several days more before the ice breaks, even if the mercury stands as high as it is today.

'CHOOSE AMERICA!'

(New York American, February 15, 1936)

Having viewed the mistakes of the Administration from the inside for nearly three years, George N. Peek, who repeatedly attacked Secretary Hull's visionary tariff policies, points out in "The Country Home":

"The books show we have taken a trimming in international finance. I propose we go back to plain, straightforward Yankee trading and take care of ourselves first."

Mr. Peek described the United States as already "invaded by foreign capital and goods," as well as "alien squatters," some of whom, he declared, "CARRY ON CONSTANT AGI-TATION AGAINST OUR GOVERNMENT."

As a corrective, Mr. Peek suggested a constructive touchstone, namely:

"When we Americans choose, let us choose America."

Prior to the setting up of adequate laws to protect American living standards and ideals, the people can do much through their own voluntary conduct as buyers of merchandise.

If imports of competitive merchandise are excessive, the people can stop the influx quickly by exercising discrimination when they come to the marts of trade.

They can widen employment opportunities at home and thus indirectly heighten their own economic security by invariably showing a preference for the product made in America.

To "Buy American" means to elect that AMERICAN WORKERS BE FULLY EMPLOYED.

When such a preference is shown in the stores it means a vote in behalf of continuance and extension of the superior American standard of living.

It is an expression of the desire to make all Americans self-supporting again, removing the unemployed from doles and synthetic made-work.

Buying American helps to re-create prosperity through encouraging the free circulation of goods and services through the body economic.

It is a tangible way for persons to give work through employment of one another.

When the exchange takes place along national lines, the person thus employed automatically becomes a buyer for another American's labor.

On the other hand, when competitive imported merchandise is bought, we are in effect NEGLECTING FELLOW AMERICANS and are instead GIVING EMPLOYMENT TO JAPANESE, GERMANS, CZECHS AND OTHER FOR-EIGNERS WITH LOWER LIVING STANDARDS THAN OUR OWN.

Pending the adoption of pro-American practices by our public servants at Washington, we can proceed in the right direction through voluntary action.

Even later, BUYING AMERICAN will be an effective supplement to protective legal measures.

PROBLEMS FACING KING END HIS CAREFREE DAYS

Next Few Weeks Will Probably Be Busiest Edward VIII
Has Ever Spent

HAS VARIETY OF CARES

By Charles A. Smith
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Feb. 17—(INS)—Gone forever are the carefree days of Edward of Windsor.

The next few weeks will probably be the busiest he has ever spent.

Assumption of kingship has loaded him with responsibilities that will allow him no time to rest and recover from the strain of the ceremonies attending his father's death.

In addition to all the matters of State which urgently require the new king's attention, he will have to decide innumerable questions concerning his personal arrangements for the future.

One of the first is where he is going to live. He has already taken over one room at Buckingham Palace, official London home of England's kings, for the conduct of State business, but he will have to decide whether he will take up residence there or continue to live at York House, St.
James's Place, which is his present
London home.

In all probability he will remain at York House for several weeks, until the necessary arrangements for the removal of his household have been completed.

As for his country home, it is extremely likely that this will continue to be at Fort Belvedere, near Windsor Castle, which has been a favorite retreat of his since 1925. It has the great advantage of being situated within easy reach of London.

Another important question which needs Edward's attention is that of the future of the Duchy of Cornwall, the vast estate from which he derived his income while Prince of Wales. Already he has the matter under review, and has had long conferences with officials, with whom he discussed the future of the Duchy.

Under a charter of King Edward III, in 1337, the title of Duke of Cornwall has always been held by the Heir-Apparent to the throne. The Duke of York, it is pointed out, is not Heir-Apparent, but Heir-Presumptive.

Some believe Edward will grant the dukedom to his brother in order that

"Tale of Two Cities" Is Film Which Grips All

Truly magnificent in its spectacular sweep, yet absorbing in its delightful intimacy, "A Tale of Two Cities," starring Ronald Colman, opens tonight at the Grand Theatre.

Ronald Colman's fans will find him at his best. He never has had a role which gave him such opportunity for the quiet humor, the high drama and the poignancy he expresses so well. As Sydney Carton, whimsical, sardonic, brilliant wastrel, he reaches the peak of his artistic career.

The story of "A Tale of Two Cities" is intimately known to millions of readers. It tells of the joys and sorrows, the adventures and the trials of a little group of people, English and French, who are caught in the maelstrom of the French Revolution of 1789. Specifically, it tells of the strange love of Carton and Lucie Manette, played by Elizabeth Allan—a love that was doomed to frustration in life, yet which transcends death in its sublime majesty.

With the star is a cast of 112 stars and featured players, most of them
world favorites.

TWO NARROWLY ESCAPE BEING TRAPPED BY FIRE

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bruden Jump Over Flames in Hallway to Reach an Exit

WIRING CAUSE OF BLAZE

Two persons narrowly escaped being trapped in their bedroom early yesterday when fire was discovered burning through the floor of the hall, just outside of the bedroom door of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bruden, 115 Cedar street. The flames had seared the walls of the room adjoining the one they occupied.

It must have been a woman's intuition that awakened Mrs. Bruden, and as she opened the door and saw flames leaping up in front of her, she screamed. This awakened her husband and both leaped over the flames. Mr. Bruden ran to the first floor and called the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department.
Then returning he and his wife formed a bucket brigade and fought the fire until the firemen arrived.

The flames apparently started between the joists of the second floor over the front entrance. The flames burned through the flooring of the hallway. A room on the second floor above the front entrance and adjoining the bedroom occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Bruden was considerably burned and the flames were rapidly eating their way toward the stairway, which was the only means of exit to the first floor.

Firemen when they arrived found they had a difficult battle on their hands as the flames had started through the flooring and up the partitions. A booster line and chemical were efficiently used and the flames quenched with practically no damage done to the other portions of the dwelling. Chief Hagerman was in charge and said he thought the loss might run as high as $1200, including clothing and the damage done to the property.
Electric wiring is blamed for the fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruden retired at about 12.30 and it was shortly after 4.30 when they discovered the fire. The blaze no doubt had been burning for several hours as thick joists were burned through. The property is partly brick-paned. The firemen did very good work in stopping the blaze, as they did, and also in using a minimum amount of water and chemical, so that very little damage was done to other portions of the house and contents.
The house is owned by the McCoy estate.

Rescue Man From Shack On Island Near Morrisville

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 17—Thomas Avers, 61, who has been living in an old fishing shack on Cochran's Island, several miles below Morrisville, was rescued Saturday by Chief of Police Albert Cooper and a group of volunteer firemen. The police learned that the aged man was alone on the island and was in a perilous condition. Chief Cooper secured the assistance of the Union firemen and they drove there with a piece of fire apparatus. After crossing the ice in the creek the firemen and chief had to walk two miles to the man's old shack. There he was found unconscious and nearly frozen to death. He was wrapped in blankets and carried up the island to the point where a crossing could be made and there he was placed upon a small sled and pulled over the ice to the mainland. He was then placed upon the fire apparatus and rushed to St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, N. J., where he is in a serious condition.

TVA Constitutional

Washington, Feb. 17—The administration's Tennessee Valley Act—TVA
—was rendered constitutional today by the Supreme Court. The decision was rendered on an appeal of George Ashwander, and other stockholders of the Alabama Power Company, who sought to cancel transmission by TVA.

The high court's decision was applied only to the operation of Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals, and the power plant and did not encompass the whole range of the TVA.

This left the door open to possible other constitutional challenges of TVA activity in the future.

Claims Coughlin Is "Disgrace"

Washington, Feb. 17—The Reverend Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit "radio priest," is a disgrace, according to Representative O'Connor, Democrat, of New York, who today made a threat to beat the priest "from the Capitol to the White House."

After listening to the priest's broadcast yesterday, O'Connor said he dared him to come here and repeat the charges he made over the radio.

Deny Italy's Victory Claim

London, Feb. 17—The Ethiopian government today officially and formally denied Italy's claim of victory in a ten-mile advance beyond Makale, on the northern front.

Denying Ras Moulougetta's forces have been routed, the statement said:
"Conditions at Makale remain unchanged."

Bombing Plane Shot Down

Addis Ababa, Feb. 17—One Italian bombing plane was shot down and a captain and four members of the crew were wounded today during an Italian raid on Dessaye, according to an official

The bombing raid was evidently staged in still another attempt to "get"
Haile Selassie, whose headquarters are at Dessaye.

The announcement stated the Italian plane was equipped with six machine guns.

ANOTHER CHILD DIES OF RABIES IN TOWNSHIP

Peter Triszczuk, 13, Victim of Dread Disease, According To Diagnosis

NO HISTORY OF A BITE

Another death attributed to rabies has occurred in Bristol Township and this makes the second death since January 13th, which has been attributed to the same disease.

The latest victim is Peter Triszczuk, 13, Magnolia Road, Bristol Township.
An autopsy was performed yesterday afternoon at the Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia and all indications pointed to rabies, it is reported.

The child was taken ill Saturday morning and was taken by his father to the office of a physician. The youngster was ordered to bed and in the afternoon it was found that there was no improvement and the patient showed much uneasiness. He was removed to the Hahnemann Hospital and died yesterday morning.

The boy's father, Michael, said the boy never told him he had been bitten by a dog and just how the dread disease was contracted is not known.
Physicians report that sometimes the disease is three months in developing.

When first stricken the patient showed great fear and other indications of rabies.

Late last night a positive report had not as yet been given, but it was still said that all indications pointed to rabies.

This is the second death in Bristol
Township attributed to rabies since January 13th when little Frances Voit died of the same disease.

A number of dogs suffering with rabies have been reported in Bristol and also in Bristol Township. Dog quarantines are now in force in Bristol borough, Bristol Township, Bensalem Township and in Tullytown Borough.

There will be a private funeral this afternoon for the Triszczuk child and burial will be in St. Mark's cemetery.

BOY, 4, DIES OF SHOT FROM AN OLD PISTOL FOUND IN DRAWER

Edward Finan, Andalusia, Is Fatally Wounded As Family Sits at Breakfast

DIED THIS MORNING, 8.30

Parents Thought Children
Were Asleep When Pistol
Shot Was Heard

ANDALUSIA, Feb. 17—Little Edward Finan, 3½, son of James Finan, Lowell avenue, fatally shot himself
yesterday morning as he and his brother, Billy, 5, searching for adventure, found an old pistol in the drawer of a bureau. The child died this morning at 8.30. Edward, according to Billy, picked up the pistol and "it shot." The 32-calibre bullet pierced the little fellow's intestines. He ran screaming from the room as his brother called "Daddy."

The child was wrapped in a blanket
and rushed to the office of a physician, nearby. Then he was taken to the Frankford Hospital.

The accident occurred at about 7.30
as Mr. and Mrs. Finan, daughter Sarah, 15, and son Joseph, 13 months, were in the kitchen of the Finan bungalow eating breakfast. "We thought Edward and Billy were asleep in their room," says Sarah in describing the tragedy.
"We heard a shot and then Billy called.
Father jumped up from the table and ran to the room. As he reached the door, Edward ran out."

The lad's parents seeing that their son had been seriously wounded, wrapped him in blankets and rushed him to the nearby office of a physician and from there to the hospital.
All day they remained at the bedside of their son, while Sarah remained at home mothering the other awe-struck children. There are seven children in all, including in addition to those mentioned, Elisha, 7; James, 13; and Charles, 11.

Bucks County Detective Anthony
Russo, Bristol, was called to the hospital and after a preliminary investigation he said that he believed the child had accidentally shot himself. Billy was so unnerved by the tragedy that it was difficult to get a coherent story from him but it appears that the two children awoke and got out of bed.
They began playing about the room and Edward got from a drawer the old pistol which had been about the house for years. In handling the pistol it was discharged.

Powder marks on the child's body indicate that the firearm was discharged at close range.

"BLUE MONDAY"

Who remembers when Monday was primarily a day when the weekly wash was rubbed on a board and hung up in the back yard to dry, and when it was referred to by mother as "blue Monday"? It also was a day when meals were more hastily than delectably thrown together and on which the whole housekeeping routine seemed somewhat askew. Modern machinery has fixed this. The electric washer, drier, and ironer, not to mention the electric dishwasher, cake beater, and pancake flopper, have brightened up this first day of the week for the madam, and the term "blue Monday" is almost unknown to the present generation.

Is this happiness also enjoyed at the White House on Mondays? No—a thousand times—it is not. Monday is the bluest day of the week for Franklin D. Roosevelt. It is the day on which the Supreme Court hangs out the New Deal wash in the front yard for everybody to see. Nearly every Monday it renders at least one opinion (this satanic habit began just about a year ago) that a certain (almost all by now) New Deal brainchild was born illegitimately and without proper regard for the marriage vows as set forth in the Constitution—tschik, tschik.

Someone will no doubt achieve wealth (not for sharing purposes) and fame (not for exploitation by newspaper reporters) in the not far distant future by inventing an electrical contraption which will create artificial sunshine for use in the White House on these perplexing Mondays.

WHY ADVERTISING PAYS

Plainly the newspaper is a good advertising medium, because, in the first place all those who read at all read a newspaper some time during the day. The 2,000 and more English language newspapers in this country have a total circulation of more than 40,000,000 readers daily, more than 40,000,000 papers bought and paid for by a people who read and demand the news of advertising as well as the news of the world.

Newspaper reading is a fixed daily habit, and nothing is so close to a man or woman as the particular newspaper of their individual choice, which they verily swear by.

The newspaper advertisement is set in an atmosphere of interest and action, among things which have just happened or are just about to happen. The "do it now" impulse fairly throbs out by the advertisement set in such atmosphere; that is why in the alchemy of suggestion the language of the leaden type is immediately transmuted into the gold of buying.

The manufacturer who advertises in the daily press helps the retailer who handles his products, and the retailer who advertises in that same daily paper has a strong and double pull on the consumer.

Quite a number of expectant fathers have been seen around town making arrangements for the new bonus baby bonds.

A Bismarck cocktail holds that 3.2 beer is intoxicating. Worse than that—with Dakota temperatures as low as 30 below, it's untimely.

As the bonus was understood at this writing, the veteran will get the baby bond and the taxpayer will need the soothing syrup.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Aug. 6, 1874. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

At Trenton, N. J., Monday afternoon, the main reservoir which supplies the city with water gave way about thirty millions of gallons of water were poured upon the city and dashed down Pennington avenue in a huge volume. No damage was done, however, beyond the filling of cellars, sweeping away of fences and drowning of chickens. It is estimated that one thousand dollars will pay for the damage done exclusive of the flooding of cellars. The disaster was caused by leakage around an old pipe, which had been left embedded in the soil since the erection of the new reservoir. The broken part of the reservoir is a chasm measuring 25 feet across at the top.

Robert B. Carey, formerly of Bristol, had an exciting interview with a burglar at his residence in Philadelphia last week. Feeling chilly during the night, he got out of bed, and lowered the window, and on walking across the room in the dark, stumbled against a boot. Knowing that his boots were not in the room, he commenced an investigation, when he found himself clenching with a man who made a furious lunge at him with a knife. Mr. Carey caught him by both arms and threw him downstairs. The noise awakened his family who rushed out of their rooms only to see the burglar gather himself up and depart. A grandson of Mr. Carey, sleeping alone, was found to be under the influence of ether administered by the robber, who was afterwards captured by the police, and identified by Mr. Carey and his son-in-law at the station house.

NEWPORTVILLE—William McCoy, farmer for Mr. W. Johnson, had a chicken hatched about two weeks ago without any eyes. The chicken is alive and doing well, and they hope to raise it. Last year Mr. McCoy had a chicken with four legs; it only lived a few days.

Digging through mud and cobblestones, to lay the foundation for a foot-bridge over the mill-race at foot of Market street was commenced this morning.

DAVISVILLE—This quiet little village was startled about twilight last Saturday evening by the excitement attendant upon a runaway, and the sudden termination of the same. Eight city boarders who are spending this summer at Mr. Joseph Hart's were taking a ride, when his pair of young horses scared at some object on the side of the road, and becoming unmanageable, ran rapidly down the street road, until the wheels struck the safety post at the side of a bridge, when the concussion threw his spirit-ed Patchen coil off the bridge, and swung her under it, in the water, where she hung suspended for a quarter of an hour, until help arrived. No damage was done to the frightened passengers, and the entire affair was a narrow escape from more serious consequences which seemed imminent.

On last Saturday, a mass meeting of the citizens on the proposed line of the Bristol and Attleboro' Railroad, was held at Attleboro'. There were more in attendance than at any previous meeting. The engineer, Van-darlinan, submitted profiles of four different surveys. Three were on the eastern side of Attleboro', and one on the Eastern. An informal vote was taken at the meeting as to which would be the most preferable route. The unanimous decision was that the West side would be the most desirable. This route will cost about $125,000, including the right of way.

A new post office has been established at Delp's tannery, on the Quakerstown road on the line of Bedminster and Rockhill township. The name of the office is Church Hill. R. E. Delp has been appointed post-master.

A correspondent informs us that the person in charge of the P. O. in a certain village, makes a practice of sending the contents of postal cards to members of the family, as well as visitors and others, regardless of the $50 penalty which is thus incurred for each offense. We publish the complaint for the benefit of all Post Masters.

WARMINSTER—On Friday last as Charles Kirk and wife were passing Johnsville, their horse became frightened and leaped into the gutter and upset the carriage, injuring both considerably, and breaking the carriage badly.

CHAPTER XXXIV

The Inspector's next victim was Mrs. Carrington. "To you I grant less cordiality. But you were still intent, even as these others, upon preserving your own, even to the extent of sacrificing others. You were jealous of your husband's renewed interest in his childhood sweetheart. You were arrogant and proud and self-assured in your handling of the affair. I do not believe your motive, when you demanded that Miss Sinclair rectify the situation, was love of your husband so much as a selfish pride that refused to admit another woman's attractiveness."

"You are deliberate and calculating personality. You have stated that you decided either you or Miss Sinclair must be removed from Mr. Carrington's life. You are not the person to efface yourself. You have no alibi for Thursday, the 20th of October. Might you not have reached the conclusion that death was the most effective removal known to the mind of man?"

The woman straightened defensively. Her lawyer was on his feet protesting, but the Inspector took up Bruce.

"You, who were once ready to promise to protect this murdered girl all the rest of your lives, who once loved her in quietude and sunshine, could not face the earnestness of her life, the real depth of her personality. You wanted her as a summer playmate, not as a wife. With that change came also a mad, fanatic devotion to another woman, to a woman whom you married before your engagement to the little teacher was broken. In your self-centered infatuation, you saw only threats and reproaches in the sad, heart-broken little note she wrote you. You were angry and fearful that this brittle marriage of yours might suffer at her hands. One hour and a half after that letter was read by you, Miss Constance Sinclair lay in her own blood, shot through the heart, and no one can say where you, Bruce Lloyd, were during that time. You are without an alibi."

Lloyd's face was a brilliant red; his lawyer, too, was clamorous. I watched the Inspector, fascinated. He may have been melodramatic, but he was effective. Every one of those six people was worked into a high pitch. All were sitting on the edges of their chairs, eyes on his moving finger, emotions rising to the boiling level. Something had to happen; someone had to break.

Perkins braced himself as his turn came last. He was visibly shaking, his lips were dry, and his hands wringing each other.

"And you, who were the young lady's superior, the incumbent of the highest position in the guidance of our adolescent youth, who should rank as one of our most potent moral forces in this community, you denied that you had visited her on that Thursday night, tried to conceal that you knew her beyond your professional association."

"Yet you were there at nine o'clock; you left her at nine-fifteen and were out of the house at nine-twenty. She was alive, you say. Yet in ten minutes she is known to have been dead. You were the last to hear her speak, and the words she said threw you into despair. You were in love with her. Her manner, her speech, her whole self drove home to you the conviction that she was beyond any reach of yours. You could not offer her marriage because you were secretly a married man!"

The Inspector paused and then resumed sternly:

"Your wife, who at first condoned your visits to the teacher because they were a blind for your secret relation to her, heard your avowal of love to Miss Sinclair. You are afraid of your wife, for she is a passionate, determined woman, a woman with gangland connections."

In your rage of frustration, in your frenzy of fear, you ran down the stairs, leaving behind you the end of your problem, death for the innocent teacher!"

O'Brien rose. His great finger leveled itself at the principal of the high school.

"Frederick Perkins, I charge you with the murder of Miss Constance Sinclair!"

I didn't believe it. I didn't believe it even when Perkins, looking like a gasping goldfish my brother once held out of the water when we were kids, dropped with open mouth and set eyes to the floor in a dead faint. I didn't believe it even when the other five almost collapsed from sheer relief. I still didn't believe it after Allen had kissed me and gone, and the others were cleared out by the detectives.

O'Brien wiped the perspiration from his forehead. "Whew, Miss Julie, I don't often put on a show like that! What did you think of it?"

"I thought it was swell," I said, "only I think you picked the wrong horse."

O'Brien was too amazed to be angry at my impertinence. I hastily went on, to cover my impudence. "The case against him isn't any sounder than that against any of the other five, except in the point of time, is it?"

He shook his head. "An it seems to me that that is offset by something awfully important that you forgot. You didn't provide him with a gun anywhere along the line. You base the whole thing on his sudden realization of the situation after he got there that night, on his acting on violent impulse. If she had been choked to death, or hit over the head with a bookend or something, it might work. But after all, she was shot."

I was terribly sure of myself. Everything he had said in summarizing the cases against the six that afternoon had strengthened my conclusion.

"Then, what, Miss Watson, is your discovery?"

If he was sarcastic, I was too much in earnest to notice it, then, I told him about Poe's Purloined Letter and how finding the obvious solved that mystery. I told him I had thought and thought about the obvious clue which would point out the murderer to us surely. And the Heir-Presumptive will have the benefit of the estates and thus enable him to live in the style befitting his new dignity.

Yet another question which concerns Edward closely, and which he will have to settle, is whether he should give up flying, except in cases of extreme urgency.

It is understood that he has already been strongly urged to do so by those who are in close touch with him. It is felt that now he is king he should not take unnecessary risks, and that if he continued his frequent flights it would be placing too great a responsibility upon the shoulders of the men who pilot his machines.

And if Edward does decide to give up flying, only his closest friends will be able to realize the extent of his sacrifice, for he is undoubtedly one of the keenest airmen in England, and he probably holds one of the longest flying records.

On the other hand, if he continues to fly, Captain E. H. Fielden, who has been his pilot for many years, will hold the new position of chief air pilot to H. M. the King.

There are many other smaller personal matters awaiting Edward's decision.

What, for instance, is going to happen about his Canadian ranch?

Edward is now one of the few British monarchs to have land overseas by right of purchase. Although he has not visited his ranch for some years, he takes a constant interest in the working of it. It also provides him with a perfect vacation retreat in the foothills of the Canadian Rockies.

The guess of most people is that the new king will decide to sell his Canadian holding, or make it over to one of his brothers.

Motoring circles, too, are awaiting with interest any decisions the king may take with regard to the formation of a new royal fleet of automobiles.

It is suggested Edward may decide to re-equip the royal garage. He has always been an enthusiastic and practical motorist, and has been used to driving himself about in high-powered sports models. Whether or not he will continue to use semi-sport cars or adopt the stately limousines in which his father used to drive is a matter for him alone.

In this connection, however, it is significant that Edward in the past two weeks has used the maroon and scarlet motorbrougham, which was his father's, for his journeys between York House and Buckingham Palace.

Yachtsmen are interested in the new monarch's attitude toward yachting. They are asking what is to become of the Royal yacht Britannia, 35-year-old vessel in which the late King George spent some of his happiest hours.

Edward has never been a keen yachtsman like his father was, and the most that can be said at the moment is that there is little prospect of a new racing yacht being built to take the place of the veteran Britannia.

There is also the future of the royal racing stable to be decided. Edward has shown little interest in racing and if he decided to keep his father's stable it will be purely from a sentimental point of view.

These are just a few of the scores of problems awaiting Edward's decision. They will be decided by his Majesty in consultation with the Lord Chamberlain, the great officers of the Royal Household, members of his secretarial staff, and above all, in consultation with the widowed Queen Mary.

The thing likely to sway Edward more than anything else in reaching his decisions will be a desire not to put any of the Royal servants out of work. A great many will be pensioned, but wherever possible the great household will be maintained.

Interesting Program For Parents' Night

teachers who will appreciate all comments and be glad to discuss any phase of the work.

Parents are asked to feel free to enter any classroom and observe the work in progress there. The classes in session will be the regularly scheduled classes for Tuesday morning, with a few changes, so as to have the librarian on duty in the library, and a chemistry class at work in the laboratory.

The library will be open the entire evening so as to give the parents an opportunity to see the wealth of literature, reference books, and periodicals available to the pupils. The librarian will gladly answer any questions in regard to library privileges or regulations.

Many attractive programs have been prepared which will be distributed to the parents upon their entrance into the building. These contain an interesting foreword by Mr. Warren P. Snyder, superintendent, important directions and comments by Miss Effie H. Watson and Mr. David L. Hertzler, principals; a list of the classes, subjects and teachers scheduled for that evening; and a catalogue of the extra-curricular activities with their purposes and aims.

The schedule of the classes of the evening follows:

"HIGH SCHOOL TRAGEDY"

by MAXINE CANTY

CHAPTER XXXV

Things happened so fast after that, I never did comprehend all of them. It must have been around three or three-thirty when the word came that Mrs. Sardon, or Mrs. Perkins, had fallen. Several officers were called in and O'Brien began to issue orders.

"Smith, call the train station, go there if necessary. Notify, check the buses, Frank, all garages. Learning, send these messages to the boats on this side of the Bay and to those in San Francisco. Julie, type out descriptions of Mrs. Sardon. Make them short and to the point. Men, get these descriptions as fast as she writes them and get going."

I worked like mad, scarcely stopping to think. It wasn't hard, for hadn't Mrs. Sardon been my pet suspect from the start. . . . Meanwhile, O'Brien was telephoning, getting men on her trail in every direction out of St. Joseph and by every means of transportation.

In a half hour, Smith telephoned in with the first news. She had bought a ticket for San Francisco and had boarded the train at three o'clock. Atwater, who had gone out to get Mrs. Sardon-Perkins while O'Brien was lecturing the suspects, must have missed her by a very few minutes indeed.

The Inspector wasted no time. He grabbed his hat. At the door, he turned to me. "You want to be in on this, don't you? It's your show. Come along!"

My hat and coat were in my hand and I was down the hall after him. We jumped into his big police car with the radio and the siren, and away we sped toward San Francisco in pursuit of the fugitive.

St. Joseph is 25 minutes' ordinary driving or train traveling from Sausalito. At the town on the coast, both the trains and the auto highways converge. There one gets a passenger boat to the city, or from another wharf, one can drive one's car onto an auto ferry.

Once on the train, Mrs. Sardon would not doubt, proceed to San Francisco, there hoping to lose herself in the crowds of the city. Unless she got off the train at some small town along the route, she would have to proceed to the place where we were heading for in our car. There she could get on her trains, buses, taxis to other points. I wondered what the Inspector was going to do?

On our way, my description of Mrs. Sardon was coming in over the radio. "All cars look for a woman of this description, wanted for murder in St. Joseph!"

It is a 25-minute drive, I said, but we reached the wharf in eighteen minutes. The auto ferry was about to pull out. O'Brien showed his badge and halted it. Then they waited while he talked to a man standing there.

"Any news?"

"No, Chief. I've watched every car, there were only ten at this time of day; no woman of that description drove on."

"Keep watching. She may lie over here for a few hours and then try to make it."

"Yes, sir."

"By the way, call Attorney Martin's home in St. Joseph—tell the family I'm taking their daughter, Julie, with me to San Francisco."

The man regarded me curiously. "Yes, sir."

We drove on and the patient decks raised the apron while the whistle shrieked and we moved ponderously forward. The Inspector then explained to me:

"We are running a chance, playing a hunch, call it what you will. The woman must have got wind that her husband was in custody, that he was being questioned. She decided the time had come to get away before she was taken in. It seems to me, that since she was not sure we knew she was Mrs. Perkins yet, and had no idea anyone yet suspected her, that she would go as directly as possible to the city where she has a big range of escapes open to her."

"And she was all ready to go; you know how stripped her apartment was," I recalled.

"Yeah. The trail is covered at St. Joseph. I feel that it is my fault she got away. So you and I are going to San Francisco on the hunch we'll find her there. Of course, she's clever and she's cautious. She knows how the police work. There is always the chance that she is backtracking to throw us off, or that she is lying low somewhere behind us. She has had time to reach the city and she has gone straight there."

O'Brien was worried, I could see. He knew he ought to be back in St. Joseph, yet the urge to make the actual arrest was too much for him. "Now, you see, you go upstairs to the restaurant and get something to eat. Don't know when you'll have another chance. Even if it's early, it's better to grab something while you can."

"But I don't want anything."

He opened the door, gently pushed me out, followed me, and holding my arm

ROADS ARE HAZARDOUS

Hazardous conditions on the highways due to the recent snow storms are emphasized in a bulletin issued by the Keystone Automobile Club.

The fact that main and secondary roads are open to traffic is no guarantee against danger, it is declared. Numerous stretches are slippery, requiring the most careful operation of motor vehicles if peril is to be avoided.

Among other dangers listed is the narrowness of the cleared passage through drifted snow. In many places the lanes are not wide enough for two cars to pass in safety. Under these circumstances the Club suggests that courteous driving will help keep down the accident toll.

It is pointed out, also, that trucks and buses require more roadway than passenger cars, and that caution should be exercised by drivers of both classes of vehicles.

"Highway conditions generally are worse than they have been for years," said Edward B. Watson, Manager of the Bucks County Division of the Club. "The snow-fighting forces of the State have done wonders in clearing the roads, but they cannot cope with the ever-changing weather conditions responsible for ice forming on the paving. While every effort is made to protect motorists by sprinkling ashes on hazardous stretches, it is not always possible to keep slippery places covered."

"Upon the motorist, therefore, devolves the duty of remaining alert for possible dangers, and to so regulate the speed of his car that when hazard is encountered he will be able to slow or stop without skidding."

"We also wish to advise pedestrians against chance-taking. They should remember that while road conditions remain as they are the motorist is at a distinct disadvantage in stopping or maneuvering his car to avoid walkers who suddenly appear in front of moving vehicles."

Three Trainmen Killed

Jordan, Minn., Feb. 17.—Three trainmen were killed in a head-on collision of two freight trains of the Chicago

St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha road near here early today.

A "double header" plowed into another freight train when, blinded by the swirling snow storm, the engineer failed to see the train ahead of him stalled in huge snow drifts. Several trainmen were injured.

CARE AND THOUGHT SHOULD BE USED IN BUYING A NEW BED

A good night's rest can make a new person out of almost anyone. But remember—comfortable beds are essential for complete rest and sleep.

Good beds help the persons who sleep in them to be cheerful, optimistic, and even to feel young! That is a real inducement to those who feel that now is the time to invest in a new bed. Considering how many years beds are expected to serve their purpose, thought and consideration should go into the selection of this new piece of furniture.

To be really comfortable and "a good buy" a bed should be large enough to allow the sleeper to change position many times while sleeping.

Another point to be certain about when buying a bed is that it is strong and stable for a sleeper, to be completely at rest, should have a feeling of security. A sagging bed or one which seems to sway from side to side does not give this feeling.

The third requirement of a comfortable bed is that it is noiseless. Who likes to hear quivering springs or creaking?

When shopping, try various beds to be sure to get one that is soft enough and yet smooth enough for the sleeper to be able to keep a proper sleeping posture in ease and contentment. The mattress and springs must be durable as well as comfortable.

Another important item which many times is overlooked in the selection of the bed is its construction in regard to cleaning. Ornate beds are hard to keep clean.

After the bed has been bought and delivered the possibilities of comfort are further assured if it is made up with sheets that are long enough and wide enough to cover the mattress and stay in place. Covers should be light in weight and plentiful enough to keep the sleeper comfortable in all kinds of weather. The pillows should be soft, fluffy, and small enough for the head and shoulders to remain in proper position.

If these suggestions are kept in mind when the time comes to buy a new bed, the sleeper will agree that a comfortable bed comes as close as anything to being "the fountain of youth."

HOLLYWOOD—The duel between Claude Rains and Louis Hayward in "Anthony Adverse" should be something for the two actors were fired up in advance like opposing football teams. Director Mervyn Leroy scoured Hollywood for old pictures with famous duel sequences and ran them off for his batters. They saw the fight between Douglas Fairbanks and Boyd Irwin in

Claude Rains

"The Three Musketeers" and the one between Lionel Barrymore and Ivan Linow in "Enemies of Women". If prints had been available, Mervyn also had planned to screen John Gilbert's and Albert Prisco's fight in "The Count of Monte Cristo" and the duel between Lewis Stone and Stuart Holmes in "Prisoners of Zenda".

If what you hear is true, the Alice Faye-Billy Fiske romance may be a lot more serious than Hollywood suspects. Alice admits he is No. 1 man with her right now and that time will pass very slowly until he returns from London in March.

Among the louder laughs at the song writers' banquet for Irving Berlin was Bert Hanlon's squelch to Lew Pollack. Interrupted as he was about to tell a story, the weary-voiced Hanlon drawled: "I still say a derby hat looks as good on a trombone as it does on Lew Pollack."

And, although the crowd didn't hear it, another was Groucho Marx's reply to the fellow who had seen him dancing at a night club. "That was my wife," flipped Groucho. "I danced with her once just to keep the franchise."

The river of lava from Mount Maui Loa in Hawaii will cost Barton MacLane a tidy sum if it should continue its advance. Only a couple of months ago, the actor bought a 30 per cent interest in a 600-acre pineapple plantation close to the threatened town of Hilo. With the establishment of the Trans-Pacific air service, MacLane had planned to build a home in the islands.

If you don't believe Claude Colbert is box office, Paramount is said to have established a future asking price of $200,000 for the loan of this star's services. The price is probably less for "Under Two Flags", but Twentieth Century-Fox is paying plenty.

You Asked Me and I'm Telling You! Mrs. Ivy Barnes, Minneapolis: Shirley Temple's rise to fame has been accomplished in 10 pictures. This begins with "Little Miss Marker". Previous to that, she had done bits for Fox in "Change of Heart" and "Now I'll Tell" and had appeared in some shorts.

What your singing star recently had two fights over the long sideburns he had to grow for a movie role? On one occasion, he chased a heckler through the grounds of an exclusive Pasadena hotel.

Hollywood's English colony donned black arm-bands in mourning for King George. . . . "The Music Goes Round and Round" was quite a rage, but, in the last six months, Victor Herbert's old tunes, "Sweet Mystery of Life" and "Falling in Love With Someone", have sold 250,000 copies. . . . Lupe Velez' chihuahua dog, "Negri", just underwent a caesarian operation. . . . Joy Hodges and Larry Cotton, soloist for Jimmie Grier's band, are so blue over his departure for Chicago on a N. B. TEN LOCAL BOXERS TO MEET DAGGERT BOXING CLUB BOYS HERE TONIGHT

A card of ten local boys meeting the Daggert Boxing Club, Frankford, is in store for the fight fans who wend their way to the Italian Mutual Aid Hall tonight, as amateur boxing will be renewed after a lapse of several months. The bouts are being sponsored by St. Ann's Athletic Association and sanctioned by the Middle Atlantic District of the Amateur Athletic Union.

However, the localities will be a bit disappointed because the bout between Harry Davis, undefeated Bristol colored bomber, and Joe Scheckler has been called off. Davis will not be boxing here tonight, but instead will carry the St. Ann's colors to the Madison Square Garden, New York, where he will represent this district of the A. A. U. in the Golden Glove Tournament. He will fight in the 170-pound class.

Two former fighters of the Bucks County Rescue Squad will be seen in action pitted against strong opponents. "Dumpy" Nocito, who was unbeaten at the Croydon rink, and Billy Meyers, are both listed to fight. Along with these are Al Paris and Joe Christy, both known to the fight fans of this vicinity.

The St. Ann's fighters are: Al Marchetti, Sammy Bajocchi, Battling Morrow, Vince Della, Donato Sciarra, and Tony Puccio. A substitute for Harry Davis will be announced at the ring-side.

Charles Daggert promises plenty of action to the Bristol fans by his boys, and Matchmaker Moffo, St. Ann's, is predicting victories for at least seven of the Bristol boys. Moffo is anxious to see Christy score a triumph over Johnny Robinson, formerly a member of the LaSalle boxing team.

The first bout is scheduled to begin at 8.15 o'clock, sharp.

Honor Athletes With A Banquet

stated that athletics build up a boy and all need them.

"Don't fold up after losing a game, after all, a game is just like life, what you put into it is what you get out," was Coach Dougherty's concluding suggestion.

Thomas Juno, manager of last season's football team, spoke of a pending conference which is being organized in this district and expressed the opinion that the St. Ann's Club will be a member.

The founder of the present St. Ann's organization, Anthony Russo, dwelt in his talk on the spirit of the members of the organization and the fact that today the St. Ann's Club is open to all members, regardless of nationality, religion, or politics.

Stating that the St. Ann's organization is always striving for the betterment of the community, Mr. Russo said: "In a short while we expect to make plans for a playground for the children of Bristol in the rear of our present building."

Rev. Father Marcellini Romagno, rector of St. Ann's Catholic Church, gave the blessing for the banquet and told the guests that athletics has his encouragement because it builds a strong mind. A good sport is a good athlete, citizen and religious person declared Father Romagno.

Both Patsey Moffo, president of the organization, and Toastmaster Paglione expressed their thanks for the co-operation in helping make the affair a success.

The menu consisted of: Fruit cup, soup, turkey, peas, celery, lettuce, olives, cranberry sauce, sweet potatoes, rolls and butter, ice cream and cake. The hall was decorated in keeping with the Valentine spirit and the banquet closed with dancing until a late hour.

Bomb Wrecks Tap-Room

Philadelphia, Feb. 17—Arousing an entire neighborhood, and shattering windows in many homes for two blocks, a bomb exploded today in the South Philadelphia tap-room of Vincent Margirte. Although the concussion made a shambles of the front of the establishment, none were injured. After learning the tap-room had been open only a few days, police believed the bombing had been the work of terrorists.

Probe Penal Institutions

Philadelphia, Feb. 17—"Dropping everything else," at the command of Governor George H. Earle, Dr. J. Evans Scheehle, State Secretary of Welfare, today opened an intensive investigation of the conditions in the 28 Pennsylvania institutions under his jurisdiction. The Chief Executive's order came, including an inspection of the century-old Philadelphia branch of the Eastern Penitentiary, and disclosure of the fire hazards and discipline at Huntingdon Reformatory for Boys.

"The State will make thorough inspections. That is what the Governor ordered," Scheehle declared as he left for Harrisburg to direct the investigation.

"We will not tell anybody where we are going until we get there, because that is the only way we can make a proper examination," Scheehle pointed out.

Lifting Browns Out of Red

By BURNLEY

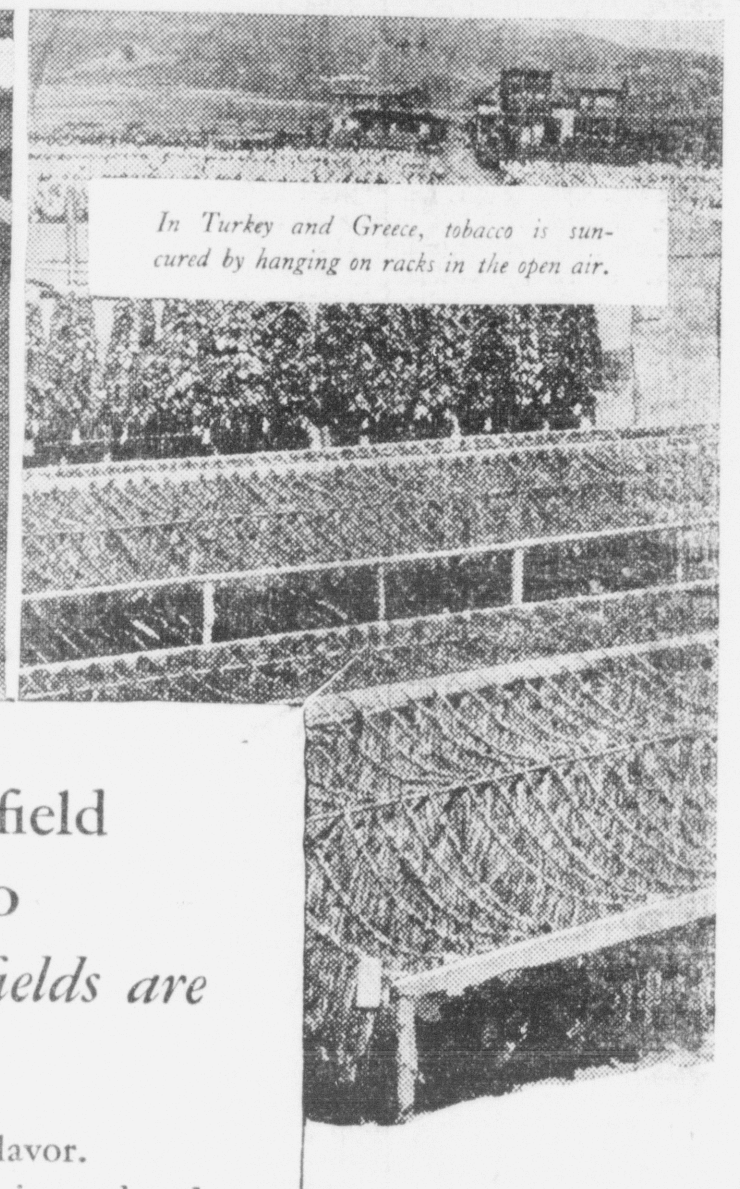

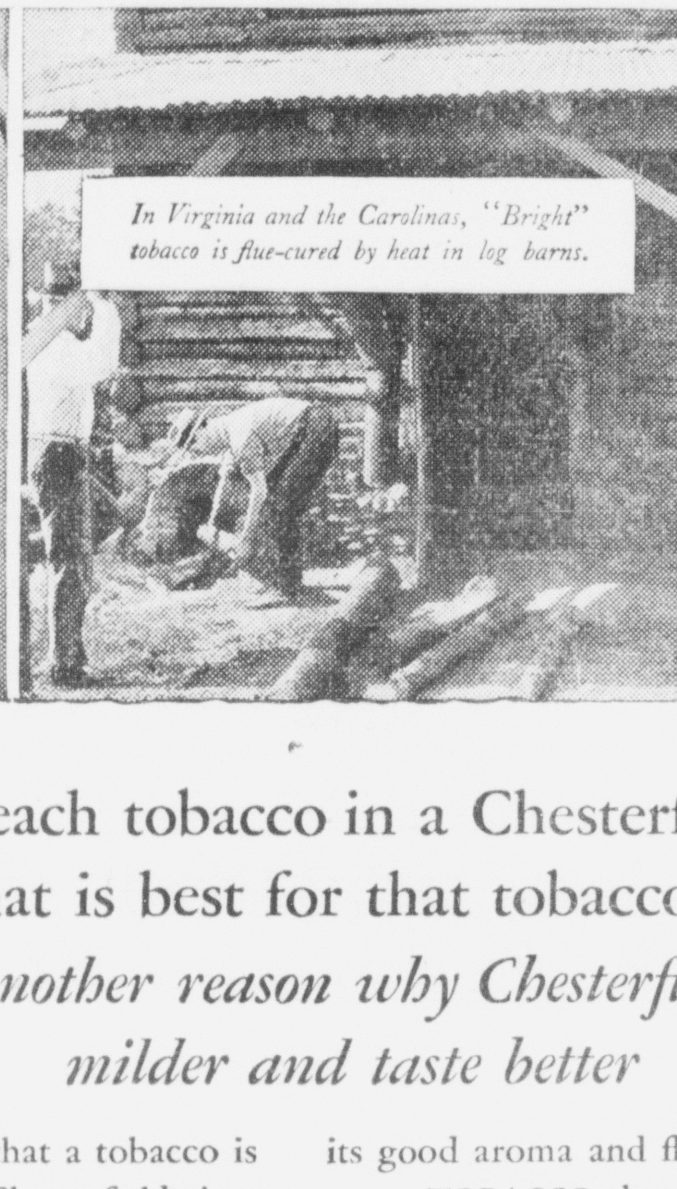

Although his team finished far in the ruck last season, Rogers Hornsby proved once again that he is one of the most capable managers in baseball.

The Rajah performed an almost miraculous feat by lifting the lowly Browns out of the red. 1935 was the first season in years that the St. Louis team in the junior loop finished on the right side of the ledger financially showing a slight but real profit, and it was due to Hornsby's business acumen as shown in his shrewd trading with other teams.

The Rajah not only brought several large chunks of cash into the Browns' till by selling players, he also got the better of these trades and transactions. A master builder, Hornsby took the cast-off players included in those swaps and made them into stars. Lyn Lary who was a flop with the Yanks and the Red Sox, proved a sensation under the tutelage of the brainy Brownie boss. Lyn is now a topnotch infielder and is generally rated the best base runner in the circuit.

Julius Solters was acquired from the Red Sox in the Melillo deal, which netted the Browns a neat financial profit as well as strengthening their line-up. Julius, who couldn't make the grade at Boston, became a crack-jack outfielder with Hornsby.

Rollie Hensley affords another proof of the Rajah's player-building genius. Rollie was kicked around from club to club until nobody wanted him, but Hornsby has developed him into one of the best catchers in the majors. (Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

We cure each tobacco in a Chesterfield the way that is best for that tobacco

... another reason why Chesterfields are milder and taste better

When we say that a tobacco is good enough for Chesterfield cigarettes, we mean just this—

... TOBACCO that is ripened in the sunshine, then picked, leaf by leaf, when fully ripe.

... TOBACCO that is cured just right by the farmer—flue-cured, air-cured or sun-cured to seal in its good aroma and flavor.

... TOBACCO that is aged and mellowed in hogsheads or bales for two years or more until free from harshness or bite.

That is the kind of tobacco we use for Chesterfields—mild, ripe tobacco, cured just right and aged for flavor and taste.
